SEC. 102. NATIONAL FILM REGISTRY OF THE LIBRARY OF CONGRESS.

The Librarian of Congress (hereafter in this Act referred to as the "Librarian") shall continue the National Film Registry established and maintained under the National Film Preservation Act of 1988 (Public Law 100-446), and the National Film Preservation Act of 1992 (Public Law 102-307) pursuant to the provisions of this title, for the purpose of maintaining and preserving films that are culturally, historically, or aesthetically significant.

(b) USE OF SEAL.—The seal provided under subsection (a)(3) may only be used on film copies of the Registry version of a film. Such seal may be used only after the Librarian has given approval to those persons seeking to apply the seal in accordance with the guidelines under subsection (a)(3). In the case of copyrighted works, only the copyright owner or an authorized licensee of the copyright owner may place or authorize the placement of the seal on any film copy of a Registry version of a film selected for inclusion in the National Film Registry, and the Librarian may place the seal on any film copy of the Registry version of any film that is maintained in the National Film Registry Collection in the Library of Congress. Anyone authorized to place the seal on any film copy of any Registry version of a film may accompany such seal with the following language: "This film was selected for inclusion in the National Film Registry by the National Film Preservation Board of the Library of Congress because of its cultural, historical, or aesthetic significance."

PURPOSE AND SUMMARY

The purpose of H.R. 1734 is to reauthorize the National Film Preservation Board in the Library of Congress, and to establish, under the Library's auspices, the National Film Preservation Foundation, to continue the protection and preservation of America's motion picture heritage.

First created in 1988, the National Film Preservation Board was reauthorized in 1992 for four years. Its mission in 1992 was two-fold: To conduct a national study of the film preservation problems facing the nation (completed in June 1993),<sup>1</sup> and to prepare a national preservation plan (released in August 1994)<sup>2</sup> to address the problems posed by the study.

The study identified the critical need to develop a coordinated national strategy to address the loss of film materials used and enjoyed especially for historical and educational purposes. The national plan recommended the creation of a federally chartered Foundation to serve as a public-private partnership to help implement these proposals.

The national plan suggested that the preservation efforts focus on those films without commercial viability or (clear) copyright ownership, but which are educationally and historically significant and therefore most in need of maintenance for future generations.

The Report was prepared by the Librarian of Congress in consultation with the National Film Preservation Board.

The Librarian of Congress and the National Film Preservation Board coordinated and prepared this plan. They brought together all the parties interested in film production, preservation and dissemination into the preparation of the study and the national plan and recruited the participation of dozens of organizations and individual participants in public hearings and drafting sessions.

H.R. 1734 will reauthorize the Board to allow it to continue to implement the recommendations found in the national preservation plan. The Librarian and the Board have already begun the implementation of that plan, although authorization for the Board expires in June 1996. H.R. 1734, by reauthorizing the Board, will allow it to continue to implement (and refine as necessary) the national plan, while the newly-established Film Foundation will enable this plan, through a public-private financing arrangement, to be properly funded to ensure its success. The Foundation, by eventually using very modest federal funds to match contributions from the motion picture industry, creative artists, other foundations and interested parties, will finance projects to conserve and make publicly accessible (in full compliance with the rights of copyright owners) films made in the United States, particularly those not already protected by private interests, for the benefit of present and future generations of Americans.

BACKGROUND AND NEED FOR THE LEGISLATION

Motion pictures are quite possibly the 20th Century's preeminent art form, currently celebrating their first 100 years of existence. As Librarian of Congress Dr. James Billington said:

Throughout its history, film has been a powerful force in American culture and national life, often shaping our very notion of contemporary events. Our challenge now is to appreciate its fullness and diversity and to protect our rich heritage for the study and enjoyment of future generations.<sup>3</sup>

Key to the production of cinema this past century has been the effort of American filmmakers, who have crafted works which have educated, entertained and enthralled Americans and the world. This indigenous American art form however is, as Dr. Billington calls it, a "heritage at-risk." The 1993 study showed that of America's feature films of the 1920s fewer than 20 percent survive; and for the 1910s, the survival rate is about 10 percent. By creating and reauthorizing the National Film Preservation Act in 1988 and 1992, Congress has taken steps to ensure the preservation of these important cultural and historical materials.

The American film heritage encompasses a wide body of work, from well-known Hollywood classics to an even larger but equally vital other portion—documentaries, independent films, short subjects (including animation), newsreels, films by or documenting minority or ethnic groups, and historical and educational films of regional importance. Unfortunately, our commitment to preserving motion pictures has rarely matched our enthusiasm in watching them. This heritage is in great danger, for the simple unassailable reason that film, no matter its staying power and importance in American history and culture, is a fragile medium because of its unstable chemical properties.

The 1993 study documented that a majority of films produced before 1950 have already been lost, while even recent films are deteriorating slowly but completely at an alarming rate. Color films continue to fade, pre-1950 films continue to deteriorate to powder because of nitrate found in their base, post-1950 films begin to decompose owing to a malady known as "vinegar syndrome." Costs for preserving a single color feature film can run to $40,000 or more. The 1994 study and the 1994 national plan recommended that the best way to prolong the life of film is to store it in low-temperature, low-humidity storage conditions to extend its useful life. Combining proper storage with selective duplication and restoration are the keys to the maintenance of our film heritage according to the study and national plan.

The Library of Congress as authorized by the 1988 and 1992 Acts took the lead in the preparation of the most important and comprehensive study ever undertaken on film preservation problems and solutions. It is being used as the model for other countries confronting similar indigenous film preservation problems. The recommendations found in the 1994 plan addressing storage, duplication, restoration, public access and similar issues have already helped the preservation effort (and are being duplicated in a separate preservation study on television and video materials currently underway by the Library).

The federal government assumed the role of the development of a coordinated study and strategy to address the policy and technological problems, share information and resources for possible solutions, and avoid duplication of effort by and within public and private entities. The Committee believes that it is not the responsibility of the federal government to assume the primary role for funding the preservation of commercially viable films, such as Hollywood feature films, which are protected by copyright and thus have "preservation benefactors." The film industry should—and to a large degree is—preserving the works it controls, thanks to the continuing economic incentives available for the distribution of this medium via new broadcast and other technological media such as videocassettes, laserdisc, cable, pay-per-view, etc., and due to collaborative ventures with private archives often in possession of the best surviving physical material.

But clearly falling through the cracks is the vast non-Hollywood portion of America's motion picture heritage, commonly called "orphan" films. These materials are the focus of this legislation. Despite the valiant efforts of the Library of Congress, the Museum of Modern Art, the UCLA Film and Television Archive, the George Eastman House, and many other large and small institutions throughout the 50 states, saving these films has become a matter of hard choices, a daily sad ritual of triage. Many film collections of local historical importance are improperly stored in high temperature, high humidity conditions in local libraries or private collections.

The Committee feels that H.R. 1734 is necessary to continue to focus on and support the private preservation efforts for these film collections. This includes the continued efforts and important work of the National Film Preservation Board in coordinating the public and private sectors, to avoid overlap, to share technological and other information among large and small archives and film producers, and to permit the mostly private funding of this work through the Film Foundation.

The purpose of this legislation is to make certain that future generations will experience films because they were preserved. The best means to do this is to foster collaborative ventures between the motion picture industry and film archives, and, more importantly, to create a public-private funding partnership involving these groups and the federal government by establishing the Foundation. These were all recommendations of the 1994 national plan prepared by the Librarian and in many cases are already enjoying ongoing implementation under the 1992 Act.

Responsibility for preserving the American film heritage is shared by the motion picture industry, the public and nonprofit film archives, and the American public. H.R. 1734 will help save our film heritage by continuing and expanding the important work of the Library of Congress and its advisory group, the National Film Preservation Board to further implement the recommendations in the 1994 national plan. The Foundation will raise the money necessary to fund via grants, these recommendations, and the film preservation efforts at public and non-profit institutions throughout the 50 states.

Congress originally established the National Film Preservation Board with passage of the National Film Preservation Act of 1988 (Pub. L. 100-446). This legislation created a 13 member National Film Preservation Board to advise the Librarian of Congress on the selection of up to 25 films per year for placement on a National Film Registry, and mandated that the Librarian seek to obtain archival copies of each film selected for a special collection in the Library of Congress.

The 1988 Act further directed the Librarian to develop labeling guidelines to determine when these films had been "materially altered." The National Film Registry proved an immediate success in focusing public interest on the need for film preservation of the physical materials. Further, the Librarian, through his efforts and the generosity of many film owners, has been successful in collecting and maintaining preprint and other archival materials for each film title on the National Film Registry which is part of the Library's collection.

Labeling, however, proved a far more problematic matter, with the Library's efforts at guidelines ultimately pleasing no one—neither the film producers, the broadcasters, the creative community of directors, screenwriters or cinematographers, nor the scholarly community. Congress decided that these contentious issues should be removed from the activities of the Library and Film Board, enabling the Librarian and Board to focus on the physical preservation problems.

The National Film Preservation Act of 1992 (Public Law 102-307) retained the National Film Registry, reauthorized the National Film Preservation Board while increasing its size from 13 to 18 members. It removed the labeling provisions found in the 1988

Act. Most importantly, it placed the bill's focus squarely on the universally accepted goal of film preservation. The Act mandated a study examining the current state of American film preservation efforts, to be followed by development of a national film preservation plan to address any problems.

A. NATIONAL FILM PRESERVATION BOARD AND REGISTRY

To date, the Librarian of Congress after consultation with the National Film Preservation Board, has selected 175 "culturally, historically or aesthetically significant films" for inclusion in the National Film Registry. This film collection is a part of the holdings of the Library of Congress. Films selected for the Registry have included not just well-known Hollywood classics but landmark documentaries, independent films, silent movies and other less well-known but equally vital segments of the American film heritage.

Thousands of public nominations are received each year and reviewed by Board members, the Librarian, and his staff. The American public, with each year's announcement, gains a better appreciation both of the vibrant richness and diversity of American cinema, and, more importantly, of the critical preservation problems remaining. Owing to their selection to the Registry, many of the 175 titles now face a far brighter preservation future. Copyright owners and others have continued their generosity in providing archival copies of Registry titles to the Library.

B. NATIONAL FILM PRESERVATION STUDY AND PLAN

Public Law 102-307 mandated that within one year of enactment (in June 1992) the Librarian in consultation with the Board: (1) conduct a study on the current state of American film preservation activities, and (2) subsequently establish a comprehensive national film preservation program for motion pictures, in conjunction with other film archivists, copyright owners and others in the film community. The Library of Congress, as the nation's largest film archive and largest preserver of film (and situs of the Copyright Office), was the proper authority on the subject matter to lead this undertaking. The study was prepared in a collaborative, open and thorough process and delivered to Congress in June 1993. Entitled "Film Preservation 1993," this report persuasively demonstrated an American film heritage at risk. Among its major findings:

(1) Fewer than 20 percent of feature films from the 1920s survive in complete form; for features of the 1910s, the survival rate falls to about 10 percent. Of films made from 1895-1950, less than half survive.

(2) Films made after 1950 (on supposedly "safe" acetate film stock) face major preservation catastrophes from "color fading," "vinegar syndrome" (an irreversible film base decay), and soundtrack deterioration.

(3) Many "lost" American films can be found only in foreign archives.

(4) Funding for film preservation programs has fallen to half its 1980 level, when adjusted for inflation.

Preparation of the national plan began after a lengthy comment period on the study. Six months of negotiations and consensus building resulted in the national plan (entitled "Redefining Film Preservation") which was released in August 1994.<sup>4</sup> The plan recommended several key actions, including:

(1) Redesigning preservation policies to underscore the importance of low-temperature, low-humidity storage in retarding film deterioration, thus ensuring that films, once duplicated, can last for centuries.

(2) Increasing film availability for education and public exhibition.

(3) Developing public-private partnerships to restore key films, share preservation information, and repatriate "lost" American films in foreign archives.

(4) Creating a new Federally-chartered Foundation to raise money to preserve films, particularly newsreels, documentaries, independent and avant-garde films, socially significant amateur footage, regional historical materials, and other motion pictures of cultural and historical importance that will not survive without public intervention. The Foundation (modeled on other successful foundations created by Congress) would be eligible to match private donations with limited federal funds.

At the fundamental core of the plan, were several principles: first, a partnering of public and private national and regional interests; second, the importance of "preventive medicine"—the knowledge that the most effective way to ensure the survival of film (both in terms of cost and long-term durability) is through cold-and-dry storage facilities; third, the comprehension, earned through past failures, that successful implementation of a national plan and the survival of film require active participation from all in the film community; fourth, an understanding that studios bear primary responsibility for preserving their own films, enabling the archives to focus their efforts primarily on those films falling outside the commercial mainstream—documentaries, independent films, newsreels, silent films, avant-garde works, and significant amateur footage—as well as other works whose copyright owners prove unable or unwilling to guarantee their preservation; and fifth, to ensure that preservation is also linked to the goal of greater public access to film, whether through theatrical exhibition, videocassette/videodisc, cable transmission, or more non-commercial avenues such as archival circulating libraries, all consistent with the rights of copyright holders.

The study and plan compellingly demonstrated that America's film heritage (particularly films not controlled by the major companies) is clearly at risk and that new collaborative approaches are required. The size of the problem by anyone's measure is enormous—100 million feet of uncopied film on volatile nitrate film stock constitutes one of many current preservation problems. By the most conservative estimate, any project to copy all of this footage to more permanent stock would cost $200–300 million.

<sup>4</sup>The August 1994 plan included input from the major and independent film studios, individual filmmakers of feature, short subject, non-fiction films (newsreels and documentaries), avant-garde films, creative artists (directors, screenwriters, cinematographers etc.), large and small public and non-profit archives and film libraries, broadcasters and repertory theaters, film and sound laboratories, educators and historians, and others interested in film preservation and access issues.

The legislation offers a two-part solution: first, continue the policy making and coordinating role of the National Film Preservation Board by reauthorizing the Board and its activities within the Library of Congress; second, establish a Foundation that will combine public and private monies to fund projects to address the solutions proposed by the Librarian and the Board. H.R. 1734 by reauthorizing the Board will permit the continuation of the implementation of the national plan, with its many ongoing cooperative ventures between copyright holders and the archives, and, create a funding mechanism via the Foundation.

The legislation describes the charter of the Foundation in two parts: (1) to promote preservation of and public access to the American film heritage, concentrating on those films not preserved by commercial interests, and (2) to further the national film preservation plan and related activities.

The Foundation will be a 501(c)(3) nonprofit organization in the District of Columbia. Working with the film preservation community, the Foundation will raise private gifts (both cash and in-kind contributions) and ultimately be eligible for limited federal matching funds. Subsequently, the Foundation will establish grant programs to make its assets available to non-profit institutions throughout the United States. The grants will go to fund actual preservation work, not administrative overhead. Grants will help fund projects such as the archival preservation and restoration of film collections, or the establishment of regional storage facilities to house endangered film collections from many institutions in archival conditions. Also, the Foundation will work to make materials more accessible in ways fully consistent with copyright laws, perhaps focusing on public domain collections important for educational and historical research.

HEARINGS

The Committee's Subcommittee on Courts and Intellectual Property held a field hearing on H.R. 1734 (and other legislation) on June 1, 1995 in the main courtroom of the Richard H. Chambers U.S. Court of Appeals Building in Pasadena, California. Testimony was received from Edward Richmond, Curator, UCLA Film and Television Archive, and President of the Association of Moving Image Archivists. Other witnesses, Martha Coolidge (Director's Guild of America) and Michael Weller (Writers Guild of America, East), although focused on the other legislation subject of the hearing (H.R. 989 and 1248), also voiced strong support for the legislation.

COMMITTEE CONSIDERATION

On July 27, 1995, the Subcommittee on Courts and Intellectual Property met in open session and ordered reported the bill H.R. 1734, without amendment, by a voice vote, a quorum being present, no objections being heard. On March 12, 1996, the Committee met in open session to consider H.R. 1734. During its consideration, the Committee adopted by voice vote an amendment offered by Mr. Moorhead to reduce the authorization for the National Film Preservation Board and the National Film Preservation Foundation from 10 years to 7 years, and to reduce the funding for the National Film Preservation Foundation from $2 million a year to $250,000 a year for fiscal years 2000 through 2003. The Committee then ordered reported the bill H.R. 1734, as amended by a voice vote, a quorum being present, no objections being heard.

COMMITTEE OVERSIGHT FINDINGS

In compliance with clause 2(1)(3)(A) of rule XI of the Rules of the House of Representatives, the Committee reports that the findings and recommendations of the Committee, based on oversight activities under clause 2(b)(1) of rule X of the Rules of the House of Representatives, are incorporated in the descriptive portions of this report.

COMMITTEE ON GOVERNMENT REFORM AND OVERSIGHT FINDINGS

No findings or recommendations of the Committee on Government Reform and Oversight were received as referred to in clause 2(1)(3)(D) of rule XI of the Rules of the House of Representatives.

NEW BUDGET AUTHORITY AND TAX EXPENDITURES

Clause 2(1)(3)(B) of House Rule XI is inapplicable because this legislation does not provide new budgetary authority or increased tax expenditures.

CONGRESSIONAL BUDGET OFFICE COST ESTIMATE

In compliance with clause 2(1)(C)(3) of rule XI of the Rules of the House of Representatives, the Committee sets forth, with respect to the bill, H.R. 1734, the following estimate and comparison prepared by the Director of the Congressional Budget Office under section 403 of the Congressional Budget Act of 1974:

U.S. CONGRESS,
CONGRESSIONAL BUDGET OFFICE,
Washington, DC, March 29, 1996.

Hon. HENRY J. HYDE,
*Chairman, Committee on the Judiciary,
House of Representatives, Washington, DC.*

DEAR MR. CHAIRMAN: The Congressional Budget Office has prepared the enclosed cost estimate for H.R. 1734, the National Film Preservation Act of 1996 and the National Film Preservation Foundation Act, as ordered reported by the House Committee on the Judiciary on March 12, 1996. Because enactment of H.R. 1734 would not affect direct spending or receipts, pay-as-you-go procedures would not apply to the bill.

The bill would impose no intergovernmental or private sector mandates as defined in Public Law 104-4 and would have no direct budgetary impacts on state, local, or tribal governments.

If you wish further details on this estimate, we will be pleased to provide them.

Sincerely,

Enclosure.

The National Film Preservation Foundation would be authorized for fiscal years 2000 through 2003, with federal funds made available on a matching basis. The Foundation would be overseen by a Board of Directors and would not be an agency or organization of the United States.

The costs of this bill fall within budget function 500

6. Basis of estimate: The spending that would occur under H.R. 1734 would be subject to the availability of appropriated funds. For the purposes of this estimate, CBO assumes that the bill will be enacted on September 30, 1996, and that the full amounts authorized in the bill will be appropriated. Estimated outlay patterns are based on historical spending patterns of the Library of Congress and on considerations of the process outlined in the bill for making funds available to the newly created National Film Preservation Foundation.

Title I of H.R. 1734 would reauthorize the National Film Registry of the Library of Congress and the National Film Preservation Board for seven years from the enactment of the bill, or for fiscal years 1997 through 2003. These programs are currently authorized through fiscal year 1996. The bill would authorize $250,000 for each year, for a total of $1.75 million over the 7-year period.

H.R. 1734 would extend the work of the National Film Preservation Board, which selects American films to be included in the National Film Registry. Under H.R. 1734, board member would represent a variety of film and arts organizations and would not be paid. The Board would select up to 25 films for inclusion in the National Film Registry each year. The Librarian of Congress would, upon consulting with the Board, work to preserve the films in the Registry and increase accessibility for educational purposes.

Title II of H.R. 1734 would establish the National Film Preservation Foundation to further the efforts of the National Film Registry of the Library of Congress and other archives of films made in the United States. The Foundation, headed by a Board of nine directors, would work to improve the accessibility and preservation of films made in the United States. The bill would authorize appropriations of $250,000 a year on a matching basis for fiscal years 2000 through 2003, for a total of $1 million.

H.R. 1734 would repeal the National Film Preservation Act of 1992, which authorizes appropriations of $250,000 a year through fiscal year 1996 for the National Film Registry of the Library of Congress and the National Film Preservation Board. The repeal has no budgetary impact.

7. Pay-as-you-go considerations: None.

8. Estimated impact on State and local governments: CBO estimates that this bill would impose no intergovernmental mandates as defined in Public Law 104-4, and would have no direct budgetary impact on state, local, or tribal governments.

9. Estimated impact on the private sector: This bill contains no private sector mandates as defined in Public Law 104-4.

10. Estimate comparison: None.

11. Previous CBO estimate: None.

12. Estimate prepared by: Justin Latus.

13. Estimate approved by: Paul N. Van de Water, Assistant Director for Budget Analysis.

INFLATIONARY IMPACT STATEMENT

Pursuant to clause 2(1)(4) of rule XI of the Rules of the House of Representatives, the Committee estimates that H.R. 1734 will have no significant inflationary impact on prices and costs in the national economy.

SECTION-BY-SECTION ANALYSIS (LEGISLATION, AS AMENDED)

TITLE 1—NATIONAL FILM PRESERVATION BOARD REAUTHORIZATION

Section 101 sets forth the short title of Title 1, the "National Film Preservation Act of 1996," and reauthorizes the National Film Preservation Board.

Section 102 directs the Librarian of Congress to continue the National Film Registry, established and maintained under the National Film Preservation Act of 1988 and the National Film Preservation Act of 1992, pursuant to the provisions of this title, to maintain and preserve films that are culturally, historically, or aesthetically significant.

Section 103 sets forth duties and powers of the Librarian under this title, including continued implementation, in consultation with members of the National Film Preservation Board, of the comprehensive national film preservation plan prepared under the 1992 Act; establishment of criteria under which films may be included in the National Film Registry and procedures for titles to be nominated by the general public; publication in the Federal Register of each film selected for inclusion in the Registry; and instructions for usage of the National Film Registry seal on film copies of Registry titles.

Section 104 sets forth requirements for the National Film Preservation Board, including selection of members by the Librarian. This section further specifies the composition of the Board and sets forth provisions relating to the appointment of Board members as well as the functioning of the Board, including selection of a chairperson, quorum requirements, meetings, basic pay, and terms of office. Under H.R. 1734, membership increases by two members from the 1992 Act. The National Association of Broadcasters have agreed to forego participation on the Board (and focus on the work with the Library on a separate TV/video preservation study currently underway). Three new members are added to the Board: one more at-large member, and one representative each from the Society of Composers and Lyricists and the Association of Moving Image Archivists.

Section 105 sets forth the Board responsibilities and powers, related largely to its role in advising the Librarian of Congress on the selections of up to 25 films a year for inclusion in the National Film Registry, including consideration of film nominations by the general public, as well as by representatives of specified types of film industry, preservation, and academic groups.

Section 106 sets forth requirements relating to the National Film Registry Collection of the Library of Congress, including acquisition of archival quality copies and additional materials.

Sections 107–109 make clear who may or may not use the seal of the National Registry and when the use of the seal is inappropriate; and set forth remedies of violations and limitations of such remedies that are available against persons who misuse the seal.

Section 110 authorizes the Librarian to appoint such staff as appropriate and to procure the services of experts and consultants.

Section 111 provides definitions for terms found in the legislation.

Section 112 authorizes appropriations of up to $250,000 per year for seven years, beginning on the enactment date of this Act.

Section 113 makes this title effective for seven years beginning on the enactment date of this Act. It makes this Act applicable to all copies of films selected for inclusion in the National Film Registry, including those selected pursuant to the provisions of the National Film Preservation Acts of 1988 and 1992.

Section 114 repeals the National Film Preservation Act of 1992.

TITLE 2—NATIONAL FILM PRESERVATION FOUNDATION ACT

Section 201 sets forth the short title of Title 2, the “National Film Preservation Foundation Act.”

Section 202 establishes the Foundation as a charitable, 501(c) nonprofit organization, and states the purposes of the Foundation to: (a) encourage, accept and administer private gifts to promote and ensure the preservation and public accessibility of the nation’s film heritage held at the Library of Congress and other public and non-profit archives throughout the United States; (b) further the goals of the Library of Congress and the National Film Preservation Board in connection with their activities under the National Film Preservation Act; and (c) undertake and conduct other activities, alone or in cooperation with other film-related institutions and organizations, as will further the preservation and public accessibility of films made in the United States, particularly those not preserved by private interests, for the benefit of present and future generations of Americans.

Section 203 sets forth requirements relating to the Foundation’s Board of Directors, specifically that Board will consist of 9 members, including two members from the National Film Preservation Board, who shall serve fixed 4-year terms. Board members will serve as volunteers, paid only for Foundation travel. The Librarian of Congress, shall appoint the Board’s initial chair, and serve as an ex officio non-voting member of the Board. This section further sets forth provisions relating to the appointment and functions of the Board.

Section 204 sets forth the Foundation’s rights and obligations.

Sections 205–206 authorize the Librarian to: (1) provide, and accept reimbursement for, administrative services and support to the Foundation; and (2) accept services of the Foundation, the Board, and other Board officers and employees as volunteers.

Sections 207–208 set forth provisions relating to audits, reports, and petitions by the Attorney General for equitable relief for certain Foundation acts or failures to act.

Section 209 authorizes appropriations for the Foundation. Originally authorized at $2 million per year for 10 years the Foundation, under the legislation as amended by the full Committee, will be authorized at $250,000 per year beginning in fiscal year 2000. Also, it authorizes the Librarian to use unexpended funds from Title 1 for Title 2.

The person authorized to place the seal on a copy of a film selected for inclusion in the National Film Registry may accompany such seal with the following language: "This film is included in the National Film Registry, which is maintained by the Library of Congress, and was preserved under the National Film Preservation Act of 1992."
